Flyover Nation: You Can't Run A Country You've Never Been To

Synopsis

Blaze TV and top radio host Dana Loesch explains that the biggest political problem today is that the people who run this country have no idea what life is really like for ordinary Americans. In fact, they have contempt for the very people they claim to represent. When the owners of a small pizza parlor in Indiana were asked by the local press whether they would ever cater a gay wedding, they said no, citing their personal religious beliefs. The internet responded with immediate outrage, posting death threats and vicious online reviews, and forcing them to shut down. All for expressing a personal opinion rooted in faith, in response to a completely hypothetical question. A new front in the culture war had been opened. When the owners of the pizza parlor told Dana Loesch on a Blaze TV interview that they might never reopen, Loesch started a fundraising campaign. Hundreds of thousands of dollars quickly poured in to support them. The people donating weren't taking a stand against gay rights; they just believed that a random mom-and-pop shop shouldn't be run out of business because media and political elites on both coasts caricature and vilify rural Americans. Most of the problems with our country today can be traced to a very simple cause - the growing disconnect between the government and media elites and the rest of us, the old-fashioned, hard-working, God-fearing Americans who are proud to live in middle America. As Loesch explains, too many people getting on their high horse about Wal-Mart have never shopped in one. Protesters outraged at small town cops have never been helped by one. Environmentalists who claim to want to protect the spotted owl have never been in the woods with one. Atheists who attack committed Christians have never sat in a pew with one. Loesch doesn't take aims solely at the Democrats; some Republicans in Congress and on the presidential campaign trail have also forgotten what life is like for the people back home. While these so-called leaders may have forgotten the people in coal towns and farming communities, the voters in those communities haven't forgotten Washington's betrayals. And it will show in 2016. As one of the most powerful and recognizable voices on talk radio today, Dana Loesch is leading a revolution of America's new Silent Majority.

Customer Reviews

This is a very good book because it makes you think. The premise is that the coastal americans, with more people, more electoral votes, and more lifestyles similarities, have walked over middle America or what Dana calls flyover nation. Flyover nation believes strongly in the second amendment, limited government, religious beliefs, and are the main reason for our current 2016 political upheaval. This book is opinion based not too many hard numbers and research like her other book. It is a must read. Don't listen to the so called reviews who have not even read the book and only have seen an interview on CNN. Don't be that guy. This is a must read because her story about growing up in "flyover" country is truly interesting and humorous!

Let's try this again. This book covers why the other 48 states are not the same as NY or DC. You see, when politicians live, eat, and breathe in DC rather than in their "hometown", DC becomes their culture. They then seem to think the rest of the USA is just like DC, hence the idiotic (not to mention unconstitutional) Federal legislation we keep seeing. This book neatly buttons up the mindset and motivations of these career politicians.

This book is fantastic! It's better than Dana's first book, "Hands off My Gun". This book is personal and Dana talks about her life growing up in Flyover Nation. As someone who lives in Flyover Nation, this books resonates with me!

While I was born on the East Coast, I have lived in "Flyover Country" for 30 years. I have worked here, been educated here, raised a family here. I served in the military here. Dana Loesch hits the nail on the head with this book. Her assessments make the case that - despite their obvious concentrations of wealth and political power - those on the coasts are at a very real disadvantage. While they may be the part of America that is most visible to the rest of the world, they are just the shell, the skin. The heart - real American values, courage, grit, honor, integrity, and the back bone of a great nation - that exists only beyond the exterior.

Dana lays out a thoughtful and well-written argument for how American politics has become the mess that it is. This book is very personal but also humorous, and insightful. Worth a read, no matter what side of the political spectrum you align with.

Dana hit the nail on the head. I am also from the Ozarks. I could picture my community, neighbors and family as reading her descriptions. It brought a smile and a tear. People from flyover nation should read this to remind you that we are not forgotten, we matter & what makes your experience special. Those that don't understand the flyover nation should read this to help begin the process of understanding.

Only two chapters in and can I say WOW! Dana Loesch has outdone herself with this one. This book will show Americans how divided we really are. Hands off My Gun was great, but for me, Flyover Nation has already far surpassed it. Short read for book people, but Dana packed the book full of important details in current American society.

HANDS OFF MY GUN was a great book.... Flyover Nation is even better..... as a staunch "Reagan conservative stuck in a liberal wasteland, this book completely resonates with me. Liberals ought to read the book....maybe it'll knock some sense into them.
